May Highway Fatalities 12% Under Last Year

In spite of the ever increasing death rate, the State of Maine reduced its automobile fatalities for the third consecutive month. During the month of May, 12 people lost their lives in traffic accidents which brought about a 12% decrease compared to May 1937.

These traffic mishaps were evenly divided in regard to the places in which they occurred, six happening in urban and six taking place in rural areas. All counties so far this year have either remained the same or reduced their fatalities with the exception of two—Androscoggin and Somerset. Those showing marked reductions are Waldo, Washington, Penobscot, Aroostook, Hancock and York. Percentage decreases for the aforementioned counties are 200, 75, 50, 43, 33, and 17 per cent respectively.

The three outstanding causes and their respective percentage figures of our fatalities are Pedestrian in Road, 40.9%; Coasting or Playing, 22.7%, and Excessive Speed, 11.3%. Conspicuous among these causes is Excessive Speed, for this cause directly involves the driver of the automobile itself. Although the speeder is involved in these fatal accidents, figures show that he is not being killed himself but is causing other people to lose their lives. Three-fourths of the people killed at this time have been non-occupants of motor vehicles while 11 people have met their death while riding in automobiles. Only four out of the total of 44 people have been drivers of these death-dealing machines. This actuality should make both passengers and non-occupants of motor vehicles realize that their lives depend upon the individuals who are behind the steering wheels of automobiles.

The human factor is the chief element in causing and preventing automobile accidents. Engineering or mechanical means and safeguards are constantly making our highways safer. While the lack of these undoubtedly contribute to many accidents, still the skillful, alert person usually survives even the most hazardous situation. While the blundering individual often manages to involve himself or others in serious accidents despite all safeguards, the human element involved is termed as recklessness and carelessness. Not less than three-fourths of our accidents can be laid to human frailty such as passing on the brow of a hill, drunken driving or operating vehicles on the wrong side of the highway.—Sgt. Francis J. McCabe, Director, Highway Safety Division, Maine State Police.

Governor Urges Care in Driving

Appealing to the citizens of Maine to exercise every precaution toward further curtailing fatalities on the highways, Governor Lewis O. Barrows has issued a statement calling attention to the fact that June has been declared Safety Month. With highway travel gradually reaching its peak with the arrival of summer weather, Governor Barrows also urges visitors to the State to exercise diligence and care in the operation of their cars.

The statement follows: Once again the month of June has been designated as Safety Month on the highways of Maine.

While this State's accident record over a period of three years has shown a gradual decline in the number of fatalities, and which is most praiseworthy, there should be no lessening of the endeavor on the part of any citizen to further improve Maine's present record.

Maine, this year, will probably entertain her greatest number of visitors, and I urge every possible precaution on the part of all her citizens who use the highways to bring about an even more marked improvement on her present record.

Let every citizen of Maine and every visitor resolve to do his or her part to make Maine the safest state in which to travel and thereby create an all-time high attainment in the reduction of motor vehicle accidents.

Collins Morgan quietly celebrated his 96th birthday at his home on Clark Street Friday, June 3. Mr. Morgan is the only Civil War veteran in Bethel. Until the last few years, he has been very active, always having one of the best vegetable gardens in town, and is still able to enjoy long rides in the automobile.

The Dust Bug Will Get You If You Don't Watch Out!

RESEARCH by the U. S. Public Health Service has shown that dust is a distinct menace to health. In addition to its effect on the respiratory organs, dust impairs the circulatory system, the nervous system, the digestive organs, and the kidneys and liver. The high mortality rate during and after dust storms, in the so-called "dust bowl" area, bears out these findings. Ordinary road dust, responsible for many inflamed eyes and contaminated picnic lunches, is also definitely unhealthful to a greater extent than is generally realized. While science has not yet found a way to control storms in the "dust bowl," chemistry has produced a material known as calcium chloride which effectively and economically prevents dust on dirt and gravel roads. The chemical, acting as an artificial rain-maker by drawing moisture from the air, keeps the road damp and seems to offer the "ounce of prevention" needed to combat the disease, contamination and inconvenience resulting from road dust. Thousands of miles of rural roads are kept dustless through this medium, and similar dust control practice is steadily increasing on unpaved town and village streets.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

The latest thing just off the griddle—red-hot—it is a U. S. broadcasting system. So I reckon the mills, they must be too slow.
And the Govt. with a radio, it could clamp down quick on a farmer in Illinois or some place, if he is objecting to some person with a slide-rule telling him just where to plant a coupla hills of corn.

They could have a farmer in jail via radio, lots quicker than by
R. F. D.

And if they send out word on Monday to plant more, because the weather is dry, and then it rains and they want the farmer to plant less, you see how hard it is to get something done—by mail.

But the Govt. it is getting its feet into everybody's door—and it is not just the farmer they are atter.

If they can tell a farmer when to wean a calf, what is to keep them from telling me when to change my underwear—if I may happen to have some, sometime.

So my neighbor he says, Jo, am glad to see you are half-way beginning to wake up.

Yours, with the low down,

THE BUTTERFLY CHASER

Sails of Windmills Gave Messages to Smugglers

The sails of a windmill, according to the way they are set, serve as a semaphore, and have a message for those who can read their signs, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald.

In the days of smuggling, millers whose mills were near the coast were sometimes in league with the smugglers, who could conveniently store their kegs of smuggled brandy, their tobacco, tea or silks among the sacks of flour at the mills. The miller could always give them a signal as to when there was danger in the shape of an excise officer prowl about, or when the coast was clear.

The danger signal was given by setting the sails in the position of a St. George's cross (the upright cross). "All clear" was signaled by placing the sails to form a St.

Andrew's cross—like an X.

The upright position is a sign of mourning at the mill, or of any other trouble. It may also mean, if adopted for a few minutes only, that the miller is about to grind.

When you find a mill's sails set as a St. Andrew's cross, you know that the miller has finished his work, or is taking a holiday. The sails of old mills which are no longer working are always found in this position.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CHOOSING A CAMERA

Fast vacation-time action calls for a speedy shutter. Nobody wants to miss shots like this, or get pictures that are blurred and fuzzy because of movement.

IF YOU are planning to get a new camera for your vacation this year, let me suggest that you do not delay until the last moment, and then have to pick your instrument in a great rush.

A camera should be chosen with care and attention to every detail—picture size, lens, shutter, view finder, ease of opening and handling, finish and durability. Moreover, it should be obtained early enough for you to become thoroughly familiar with its workings, because on a vacation you will often want to use it in a hurry.

Compare and handle several cameras before you choose. Study lenses —maybe you will want an f.6.3, to make sure of well-timed snapshots on dull days, or an f.4.5, twice as fast, for speedy action shots in bad light—as well as better indoor snapshots. It is well to bear in mind, too, that a good fast anastigmat lens gives sharper pictures — which means better enlargements if your vacation yields top-notch scenes that you want to have framed.

Make sure that the shutter of the new camera has enough speed to take care of all your probable needs.
It is bad when you have a chance for some good action snaps on the tennis court or beach and your camera shutter is too slow to get them.
Remember, too, that if your hand is at all unsteady, a speedy shutter is a great help in getting sharp pictures.

You have a wide choice of camera styles and prices. You can get super-speed miniatures with f.3 and f.2.8 lenses; others with f.3.5 lenses; cameras taking larger pictures that have f.3.5, f.4.5, and f.5.6 lenses. Naturally, the better the camera is—the more speed and versatility it has—the more it costs, but there is no need to spend in excess of your needs. Thousands of good pictures are made every day with moderately priced cameras, and they will serve for most snapshot purposes.

GOULD 8—BETHEL 3

Winners Make Triple Play

Gould Academy easily turned in its eighth victory of the year when they banged out 10 hits off the slants of Keniston and Morgan for eight runs. McFarland held the losers to four hits, two of which were gathered by E. Wentzell.

Brown, Crockett, and Adams each connected for two hits. The Gould nine is still hitting strong with six men batting over .300 and the team average at .319.

In the sixth inning a threatening rally was put on by the Bethel Club only to be squelched by a beautiful triple play. Howe opened with his only hit of the day and Morgan walked. With those two men on first and second Baker grounded to shortstop Brown who threw to Wentzell forcing Morgan. Wentzell threw to Robertson getting the batter and Eddy heaved the ball to Johnson at the plate to nip Howe who had continued around third in an effort to score at the play was being made. A triple play is a very rare one even in big league ball.

McFarland, by winning this game, chalked up his sixth win against one defeat.

HEARINGS ON POTATO

AGREEMENT NEXT WEEK

Public hearings on the proposed marketing agreement for potatoes grown in Maine and shipped in interstate commerce will be held at Caribou high school June 13 and at the State House, Augusta, June 15.

The proposed agreement was prepared by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at the request of representatives of the late potato states. As proposed, the marketing agreement would keep cull potatoes from interstate shipment in periods of moderate surplus, and federal-state shipping point inspection would be required, according to information received from the
A. A. A.

Following the hearings in Maine and in the other 16 states affected, the Secretary of Agriculture may hold a grower referendum to determine whether producers favor insurance of an order for carrying out the program. Such a referendum will probably be held about the middle of July.

Open Letter to a Drunken Driver

Travelers Safety Service

SURE, you can drive home a'right. Don't let 'em feed you any of that bunk about letting somebody else take the wheel. Any time old Pete can stand on his two feet he can drive an automobile, drunk or sober. Whatsh a few drinks between friends, anyway. You show 'em who's going to drive.

Pile 'em into the car. That sweet little wife of yours, who's such a swell kid even if she does nag you about driving when you're drunk. And that funny couple with you who want to take a taxicab home. Imagine! Wanting to take a cab! Pile 'em in. Step on the gas. Whoopee! Go places. . .

Brother, you're not the big shot you think you are. You're just a fuzzy-brained, liquored-up, obstinate ass with about as much right to drive an automobile on the public highway as a monkey from the zoo would have.

I won't appeal to your reason because it's obvious that you haven't any. I won't appeal to your emotions because they're pickled.

I only hope you'll start to drive home some night, alone, when you've one too many under your belt. Then I hope some little emergency will arise which your addled brain and fumbling hands won't enable you to meet. I hope you'll have an encounter with a tree or a telephone pole that will land you in a police cell and your car on a junk heap. As you sober up I hope the baseness of your continued offenses against society will be borne in upon you with sickening clarity. I hope the newspaper headlines will scream out to all your relatives and friends and business acquaintances: PROMINENT LOCAL MAN GETS DRUNK AND LANDS IN JAIL.

Yes, I hope an All-Wise Providence will arrange this little lesson for you. And soon, before you kill somebody, as you surely will if you continue to drive when you are drunk.

Our Trip to Portland

The day for our Portland class trip had really come at last with the weather in our favor. We started soon after 8:30 arriving in Portland about 10:30.

Our first stop was at the Oakhurst Dairy where a workman explained the process of weighing the milk and butter fat, showing us how it is tested and pasteurized. Going down to the next floor, we saw how the bottles are washed, filled, and capped, which is all done by machinery. Before we left, we were taken to a room where we were served chocolate milk and cookies.

After leaving the dairy, we drove around Baxter Boulevard and then to the WCHS Broadcasting Station where we saw one of radio's favorite noon programs, the "Cowboy Caravan," broadcast. Afterwards we were invited to stay and listen to "Six Men and a Girl," which came on a few minutes later. When that was over, we were allowed to go into the control room.

Leaving the Eastland Hotel, we stopped to hear the "Sidewalk Interview," also a radio program, where our teacher, Mr. Drummond, and one of the girls in our class, Muriel Bean, were asked a few questions.

It was then time to go to Deering Oaks where we ate our lunch. After that we visited the National Biscuit Co., and were shown how crackers are made. As the machines for making cookies were not in operation, we did not see any made. We saw the machine where the dough is mixed, then rolled out in a thin layer, and baked in a large revolving oven. From there we went to the packing room where we saw the crackers packed and labeled. As we left, each one in the class was given a pound box of delicious assorted cookies to take home.

After going on a short sight seeing trip, we went to the next place on our list which was the Deering Ice Cream factory. There we watched the workman pour the ingredients into the mixer. In the meantime we were taken into a room where ice cream is put after it is boxed, with a temperature of zero, and another room beyond that which was 24 below zero. After we were shown how popsicles are made, we were each given a generous helping of the ice cream we had seen made.

From there we went to the Western Promenade, past the Maine General Hospital and on to the Portland Press Herald Building. In the first room we saw how the type is set. The next room was where the papers are printed and folded by machinery. We also went into the editorial and composing room. In the latter the lights gave off a queer purplish color. Each of us got a small piece of waste type as a souvenir. Afterward we were all given papers which had just come off the press.

The next place we visited was the Eastern Promenade which we passed along on our way to the State Pier. Other places of interest seen were Longfellow's birthplace and the Grand Trunk Railroad Station. At the pier we went aboard the Algonquin, a government boat that was tied up at the wharf.

Our last stop was at the State Theater where we saw "Doctor Rhythm" with Bing Crosby and "Stolen Heaven" with Gene Raymond.

We arrived home around 11:30 tired, but happy. I am sure the whole class appreciates the trouble which Mr. Drummond must have taken to make it such a pleasant and instructive day.—Alzena Lord, Grade VIII, Bethel Grammar School.

A Tale of Two Towns

SHORT STORY

LITTLE Mrs. Marshall had run across from her own piazza to that of her new neighbor, "Just to get acquainted," and in the process of getting acquainted had happened to mention that she was the venerable parent of a high school boy and a normal school girl.

The new neighbor opened her eyes wide. She surveyed Mrs. Marshall's "bub," her short skirt, her slim, lithe figure, and spoke incredulously. "I'll have to believe it if you say so, but, honestly, I thought you were the sister of those children. In fact, I thought that perhaps you were a normal school girl yourself."

Mrs. Marshall laughed. "I wish I were," she said. "There's nothing I'd like better than attending that splendid normal school of ours. We call it ours, though really it is about 20 miles from our town." She smiled reminiscently. "You don't know, of course—you're a newcomer and don't know our ancient history—how this county was almost rent asunder, as they say in books, over that same school."

"Tell me about it," begged the new neighbor.

Mrs. Marshall settled herself comfortably in the rocking chair. "I really believe," she began, "it wouldn't have happened if there hadn't been such a dearth of news. You know how it is sometimes—no murders, no fires, no headlines of any kind. I can imagine it must have been dull in the Hanford Gazette office—the paper had the same name then as it has now. And probably that was why the editorial writer had an inspiration.

"That evening there appeared an editorial in the paper, gently suggesting that Hanford should have a normal school.

"And of course the Griswold Star could not let that editorial pass unnoticed. Griswold and Hanford were always racing each other neck to neck. They competed on everything. So when the Hanford Gazette said that we needed a new normal school the Griswold Star immediately piped up that they should be the ones to have it. There was a reply in the Gazette the next evening, followed by another in the Star, and the battle was on.

"After a while the papers from other sections began to take notice of the rumpus. And finally it reached the ears of the state commission of education. And what did they do but send a delegation to investigate matters?"

Mrs. Marshall laughed softly. "The delegation came to Hanford and the people welcomed them royally. The leading citizens gave them a big dinner, and took them for an automobile ride around the place, showing up all the sites they thought might be suitable for a normal school. Then the delegation went to Griswold and received a royal welcome. The leading citizens gave them a banquet and took them automobiling, showing them all the sites that might be desirable for a normal school. And then the delegation went home and the commission considered. A few days later we heard that the normal school was to be at Danborough, which was between Hanford and Griswold, about 20 miles from each.

"Well, it took quite a while for the folks in our town to get their breath, after that knockout blow. But the Hanford Gazette put the best face it could on it. That evening there appeared an editorial, congratulating the county that at last it was to have a normal school, and declaring that since it was largely due to the efforts of Hanford and Griswold that the school was to be built. It would be well for Hanford and Griswold to shake hands, forget past differences, and vow eternal friendship.

"The editorial writer of the Star was so affected by this article that he came to Hanford that very evening to personally call on the writer. The Gazette office was closed by that time, but he located the editor at her home.

"Her home?" demanded the new neighbor. "Why, I thought—was the editor a she?"

"Yes, of course—maybe I forgot to say so," returned Mrs. Marshall placidly. "He found her making fudge—and he came several times after that to talk about various matters. Each time he found himself liking Hanford better and better, and finally he decided to settle there."

"Did he go to work on the Gazette?" asked the new neighbor.

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Marshall. "He retired from the newspaper business just about the same time the Gazette editorial writer did. You see, her father had a dry-goods store, and he wanted somebody to go in with him as a partner—and—"

"And what?" asked the new neighbor.

"And now," finished Mrs. Marshall, "the daughter of the two editors is attending Danborough Normal school."

"You villain!" said the new neighbor.

Edison's Trial With Phonograph

Thomas Edison gathered his associates around him in his laboratory when he was ready to try out his little machine for recording sounds—the phonograph. His foreman bet the inventor a box of cigars it wouldn't work. The others looked skeptical, thought it was a joke. "Mary had a little lamb," said Edison into the machine. He then stopped the contraption, relates a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, adjusted the reproducer, set the machine in motion again. And they all heard it say, "Mary had a little lamb." "Boss, you win," said the foreman.

Statuary Hall in Capitol

Statuary hall in the United States capital was formerly the house of representatives chamber, and was dedicated in 1864 as a National Statuary hall to which each state might send statues of two distinguished deceased citizens. Due to overcrowding, it was necessary to redistribute one of the statues from each state, and a resolution was passed to this effect in the second session of the Seventy-seventh congress on February 21, 1933.

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him, He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young. For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Isaiah 40: 10-11, Psalms 84: 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes selections from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.
